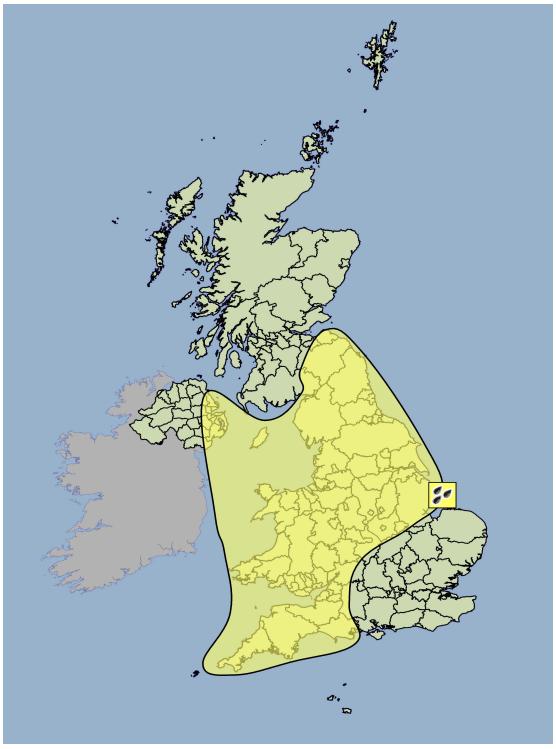
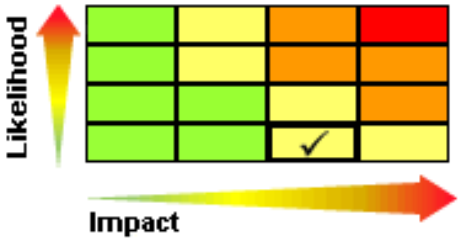
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Slow-moving bands of rain will affect parts of the UK on Saturday. Some locally heavy and persistent rainfall is expected, particularly across Northern England, Southern Scotland and parts of Wales and Northern Ireland. Elsewhere there may be further heavy showers. Some flooding from rivers or surface water is possible. There is still significant uncertainty as to where and when the heaviest rainfall and greatest impacts will occur and this alert will be updated on Friday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Sat, 07th Sep 2013 until 23:59 on Sat, 07th Sep 2013

Periods of heavy and persistent rain will continue to affect parts of the United Kingdom on Saturday. The public should be aware that there is a risk of localised disruption due to flooding.
